Joint Accreditation at Boston Children's Hospital: Education for the team, by the team.

Boston Children's Hospital has taken an exciting step forward in our mission to teach the next generation of caregivers and foster the continued growth and development of our medical staff—as well as clinicians around the world. Boston Children's is now the first pediatric hospital in the United States to earn Joint Accreditation for Interprofessional Continuing Education™.

As evidence of the quality of our programs, Joint Accreditation offers us the opportunity to be simultaneously accredited to provide medicine, pharmacy and nursing continuing education activities through a single, unified application process, fee structure and set of accreditation standards, from three global leaders in the field of accreditation.

- Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME)
- Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE)
- American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC)

By offering three accreditation's in one review process, Joint Accreditation promotes interprofessional continuing education activities specifically designed to improve interprofessional collaborative practice in health care delivery.

Joint accreditation is the leading model of interprofessional collaboration that helps improve healthcare through continuing education for the team, by the team.

Boston Children's Hospital is committed to providing high quality continuing education for pediatric providers and specialists throughout the world. As the primary pediatric teaching affiliate of Harvard Medical School, our more than 600 attending physicians and researchers are on the clinical frontier of effectively understanding and treating many pediatric diseases and disorders.
